

RSCS Special Programs Project

Most families in the Komarock/Kayole are headed by single, hardworking mothers with no or little education, social support or income to support their families. As a result children and youth have to learn to be independent and cope with street life from a young age. A lot of them get into trouble with the law for vagrancy or petty crimes and find themselves always on the run.

After reforming, RSCS supports these youth through the provision of meals on a monthly basis, medical care & other welfare issues and simple motherly attention.
